

Dr. Jessica Lane grew up in Tucson and graduated from Catalina Foothills High School. She left Arizona to attend college at Yale University where she majored in psychology. She earned her medical degree at Northwestern University and completed her residency training at Cincinnati Children's Hospital. As a resident physician, she cared for infants, children, adolescents and young adults with a wide range of acute and chronic medical conditions. She participated in the primary care track within her residency program, honing her skills in general pediatrics and preventive medicine.

Dr. Lane has now returned to her hometown with her husband Adiv and daughter Zoey and is excited to re-establish roots in Tucson. She is thrilled to be joining Desert Pediatrics and looks forward to getting to know your family.
